

Brad Gehrke has an extensive background of more than 25 years experience in cooperatives, international trade and agricultural marketing. As an economist at USDA Cooperative Services he provided technical assistance to agricultural cooperatives as well as designed and implemented research to monitor and evaluate the structure, conduct and performance of agricultural cooperatives; He designed and implemented economic and demographic studies of the U.S. veterinary medical profession and animal health industries. He has served as an International Trade Analyst for United States International Trade Commission where specialty areas included international meat marketing and dairy trade issues.

His backgrounds include coursework for a Phd at University of Missouri as well as a M.S. in Agricultural Economics from the same institution. He has real life experience running a both dairy and hog farms.